PURPOSE

The purpose of this standard operating procedure (SOP) is to increase the safety and security of probation and parole staff members by providing offenders a process to voice complaints about policies, division directives, SOPs, employee actions, actions of other offenders, and other incidents occurring within the Probation and Parole Bureau.

SCOPE

This SOP applies to probation and parole staff members and offenders who are under the jurisdiction of the Idaho Department of Correction (IDOC), Probation and Parole Bureau.

Note: Concerns and grievances directed to the deputy attorneys general (DAGs) do not fall within the scope of this SOP. See section 1 of this SOP for further details.

RESPONSIBILITY

Deputy Chief of the Probation and Parole Bureau

The deputy chief of the Probation and Parole Bureau (or designee) is responsible for:

- Overseeing probation and parole services;
- Ensuring the guidelines and procedures provided herein are adhered to; and
- Ensuring each district reviews this SOP annually.

District Managers and Section Supervisors

District managers and section supervisors are responsible for:

- Implementing this SOP;
- Appointing a grievance coordinator in their district offices;
- Ensuring probation and parole staff members are practicing the guidelines, standards, and procedures provided herein; and
- Ensuring that offenders receive a copy of the Grievance and Appeal Process Handout (appendix A) during supervision orientation.

Probation and Parole Staff Members

Probation and parole staff members are responsible for practicing the guidelines, standards, and procedures provided herein. In addition, all probation and parole staff members will be required to read this SOP annually.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

1. Grievance and Appeal Process Overview

An offender grievance is a written complaint regarding a problem or action that affects the offender. An offender must write and file his own Grievance and Appeal Form (appendix B) unless he is unable to write a grievance due to illiteracy, the inability to write the English language, or is physically unable to complete it. Under these circumstances, another party is allowed to write a grievance on an offender's behalf.

The offender problem-solving process has three (3) components:

- An informal problem-solving process between the offender and the probation and parole staff member;
- Grievances (using the Grievance and Appeal Form); and
- Appeals (using the Grievance and Appeal Form).

Note: The DAGs are not a part of the offender problem-solving process. Offenders shall not be allowed to file concerns, grievances, or appeals with the DAGs.

Note: It is important that offenders understand that probation and parole staff members are prohibited from reprisal or retaliation against anyone, for any reason, for filing a grievance or participating in the grievance process. Offenders can file a grievance against any probation and parole staff member who uses reprisal or retaliation.

2. General Guidance

For Offenders

Problem-solving should occur at the lowest appropriate level. An offender should attempt to solve the issue informally. This means making a good-faith and respectful attempt to discuss the issue or concern with the probation and parole staff member who made the decision, took the action, etc. If an offender does not feel comfortable discussing the issue or concern with the probation and parole staff member, the offender may ask to discuss the issue with the section supervisor, district manager, or higher level of authority (as appropriate and necessary). If the problem cannot be solved, the offender may file a grievance.

If an offender does not feel that the grievance process resolved the issue, it is required that the appeal process (see section 5) be exhausted before he files a lawsuit against the IDOC.

For Probation and Parole Staff Members

Probation and parole staff members shall always try to solve the problem informally at the lowest appropriate level. When staff members recognize that a problem exists but is beyond the scope of their authority, they should work through their chain of command to identify a solution.

Probation and parole staff member responses to grievance and appeal forms (appendix B) shall be clear, concise, and professional.

Control Number: 316.04.01.001	Version: 1.4	Title: Grievance and Appeal Procedure for Offenders: Probation and Parole	Page Number: 4 of 12
---	------------------------	--	--------------------------------

Probation and parole staff members shall not discipline an offender for filing a grievance or appeal or for the content contained therein. Reprisal or retaliation against an offender for filing a grievance or appeal is prohibited.

Probation and parole staff members shall ensure that all grievances and appeals remain confidential and that they only view them on a need-to-know basis.

If a probation and parole staff member learns that an offender is having difficulty understanding the grievance and appeal process, he shall advise the offender to review the Grievance and Appeal Process Handout (appendix A) that was provided to him during supervision orientation. (If the offender loses or misplaces the handout, he may be given another copy.) If the offender is illiterate, a probation and parole staff member shall explain, read, or have the handout read to the offender.

3. What Problems Can and Cannot be Grieved

Most things that affect offenders who are being supervised can be grieved; however, the following issues cannot be grieved:

Intermediate Sanctions

Intermediate sanctions are generally agreed to by the offender and therefore are not grieveable. The supervising probation and parole officer (PPO) shall ensure that sanctions are in accordance with SOP 701.04.02.020, Violation Response Matrix: Community Corrections.

Sentencing, Court, and Parole Decisions

- The length of sentence;
- Court decisions; and
- Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole decisions.

Note: With the exception of IDOC sentencing calculations, offenders must resolve all other sentencing issues and parole decisions with the applicable court or Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole.

Previously Grieved Issues

After an issue has been reviewed by the appellate authority, the administrative remedies available to offenders shall be exhausted, and any additional grievance and appeal forms submitted for that same issue shall not be accepted.

Outside Problems

Outside problems shall be defined as problems that are beyond the IDOC's control.

4. Procedures for Filing a Grievance

The following guidelines must be followed or the grievance will be rejected:

- The offender must have attempted to informally resolve the issue with the probation and parole staff member, unless it involves unethical behavior. If the issue involves unethical behavior, it must be documented on the Grievance and Appeal Form (appendix B).
- The offender cannot have more than three (3) open grievances, including appeals, in the system. 'Open' means awaiting response from the review or appellate authority.

Control Number: 316.04.01.001	Version: 1.4	Title: Grievance and Appeal Procedure for Offenders: Probation and Parole	Page Number: 5 of 12
---	------------------------	--	--------------------------------

- The offender can only raise one specific issue per grievance.
- The grievance must contain specific information such as dates, places, and names.
- A description of the problem should be legibly written (or typed) within the appropriate area on the Grievance and Appeal Form. If the form is difficult to read or understand it may be returned to the offender with instructions to make it legible.
- If probation and parole staff decides it is necessary to obtain additional information, a probation and parole staff member may interview the offender or request additional written explanation.
- Grievance and Appeal Form attachments (e.g., court rulings or other documentation the offender believes would support his grievance or appeal) are not permitted.
- A Grievance and Appeal Form must be submitted within 30 days of the incident or decision. (Note: The review authority may extend this time limit.)
- The offender must suggest a solution to the issue.
- Unless submitted via email, the offender must sign the Grievance and Appeal Form.

Note: In regards to the above guidelines, the grievance coordinator may consult with the review or appellate authority anytime there is a question regarding the acceptance or rejection of a grievance. (See the following process steps.)

6. Review and Appellate Authorities

The grievance process has two (2) decision-making authorities: review authority and appellate authority.

- Review authority – The section supervisor or district manager who supervises the probation and parole staff member that the grievance is against. The review authority shall forward to the deputy chief of the Probation and Parole Bureau those grievances that are beyond his control or the district manager's authority.
- Appellate authority – The district manager, deputy chief of the Probation and Parole Bureau, chief of the Operations Division, or director of the IDOC (as appropriate). The appellate authority shall be the next person in the review authority's chain of command.

Note: The review and/or appellate authority shall notify the IDOC's Office of Professional Standards of any issues that may require an assessment or administrative investigation. (See SOP 227.01.01.001, Administrative Investigations.)

Decision Options

Review and appellate authorities have three (3) options when reviewing a grievance or appeal: Grant, deny, or modify.

Grant – It is determined that a change or correction is warranted and that the offender's suggested solution shall be accepted.

Deny – It is determined that a change or correction is not warranted and that the offender's suggested solution shall not be accepted.

Modify – It is determined that a change or correction is warranted but the offender's suggested solution shall not be accepted.

Note: A modified response could include staff training, even if the issue cannot be changed or corrected.

7. Notifying Offenders of Grievance and Appeal Decisions

Completed, written grievance and appeal decisions shall be mailed to the offender in a sealed envelope or hand-delivered to him, folded and secured in a manner that affords confidentiality.

Note: It is vital that the date the grievance or appeal is mailed or hand-delivered to the offender matches the 'sent to offender' date that is in the CIS.

8. Retention Criteria

The grievance coordinator shall maintain hard copies of an offender's grievance and/or appeal for five (5) years and then destroy.

IDAHO DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTION

Grievance and Appeal Process Handout

What if I have a concern while on probation or parole?

Sometimes issues or concerns arise while on supervision, but the first step in avoiding issues or concerns is to know and follow the rules. The Idaho Department of Correction (IDOC) uses policies, directives, and standard operating procedures (SOPs) to establish expectations for both staff and offenders. The second step in avoiding issues or concerns is to talk to your supervising probation and parole officer (PPO). Your PPO can provide access to IDOC policies, directives, and SOPs; review your court order or parole agreement with you; and answer any questions that you have. If the PPO cannot answer your question, he will refer you to someone who can.

The following is a summary of the grievance and appeal process, but to learn more just ask a staff member for access to SOP 316.04.01.001, Grievance and Appeal Procedure for Offenders: Probation and Parole.

Attempt to Solve the Issue Informally

Offenders must avoid filing a grievance for problems that should be resolved informally. Overloading the grievance system slows the process and reduces probation and parole staff members' ability to properly address the issue being grieved.

Make a good-faith and respectful attempt to discuss the issue or concern with the probation and parole staff member who made the decision, took the action, etc. If you do not feel comfortable discussing the issue or concern with the probation and parole staff member, you may ask to discuss the issue with a section supervisor, district manager, or higher level of authority (as appropriate and necessary). If the problem cannot be solved, you may file a grievance.

File a Grievance

Within 30 days of your attempt to solve the issue informally, complete a Grievance and Appeal Form in accordance with SOP 316.04.01.001. The Grievance and Appeal Form is a dual purpose form, so it is imperative that you check the "I am filing a grievance" box.

If you do not feel that the grievance process resolved the issue, you may file an appeal.

File an Appeal

The grievance decision will be mailed or hand-delivered to you, folded and secured in a manner that affords confidentiality. Within seven (7) days of the post-marked envelope date or the grievance being hand-delivered to you, complete and submit a new Grievance and Appeal Form in accordance with SOP 316.04.01.001. (If the grievance decision is mailed to you, do not discard the envelope because it may be used as evidence to determine when you reasonably should have received a copy of the grievance.) The Grievance and Appeal Form is a dual purpose form, so it is imperative that you check the "I am filing an appeal" box, and write the related grievance number on the form.

If you do not feel that the appeal process resolved the issue, you may file a complaint with the district court that has jurisdiction. If you elect to file a complaint against the IDOC, it shall be your responsibility to obtain the correct forms from the court, complete them, and submit them to the court. IDOC staff will not assist you in any way with the filing of the complaint.
